

Join the Young Dementia Network to help improve the lives of people with young onset dementia and their families

The Young Dementia Network, hosted by Dementia UK, is a community of more than 5,300 people living with young onset dementia, their family and friends, as well as professionals working in the field of health and social care and the voluntary sector.

We know first-hand about the impact of dementia on younger people and their families and how isolating it can be. We believe that everyone affected should be well informed, feel connected to others and enabled to live life to the full.

The Young Dementia Network

- is focused on the needs and wishes of the person living with young onset dementia and their family
- connects and informs people - empowering and enabling members by sharing knowledge and creating resources
- campaigns for change to policy and practice to provide high quality tailored support and provision for young onset dementia
- works to increase knowledge, understanding and awareness of young onset dementia

Our website offers information about the Network and shares current and published young onset dementia research, our webinar recordings and newsletters, as well as a range of resources for younger people with dementia, their family members, professionals, commissioners and service providers.

Joining the Network is free. Visit our website to become a member of our welcoming young onset dementia community.
